The long term structure of housing finance also poses issues of asset liability mismatch for non-bank lenders. Take out financing & securitization are some of the avenues for mitigating the long tenor risk of financing this sector. In view of the very long gestation periods required for such financing on one hand and lack of in-house expertise in diverse sectors, banks have issues in extending long term loans efficiently or profitably despite introduction of ALM mitigants like 'Take-out' financing and regulatory incentives for issuing 'long term bonds'. India's corporate bond market is not well developed which hinders companies from directly accessing the debt market in a cost effective manner. Therefore, the main issue is how to meet the huge gap between the demand for funds for the bankable and commercially viable projects and the supply of funds from the financial system. The persisting deterioration in asset quality has necessitated sharp increases in provisions and for the first time since 1993-94, the banking system as a whole, particularly driven by public sector banks (PSBs), has started registering losses. The asset quality review (AQR) exercise carried out by the Reserve Bank identified lot of assets which had not been properly classified and which in turn had led to inadequate provisioning.
